Breakout Focus Areas

Theme: Honor the Past, Treasure the Present, Shape the Future

The Conference Committee requires presentations that are specifically developed for the IAEM Annual Conference audience and for the current years theme. When developing your submission, select one of the following topic areas or suggest one of your own.

1. Honor the Past

Emergency Management has a long and impressive history. The field has rapidly changed over the decades. What improvements have you witnessed? What past practices and events have impacted you, solidified your commitment to expand and improve current practices? What were the most impactful events in the past? What challenges have you faced and met with success? What are the greatest lessons learned?

2. Treasure the Present

The present is all we have. The world is rapidly changing, and we must embrace the “new normal.” In today’s world, it is imperative to expand our connections and engage others in our field by sharing ideas, resources and best practices. How do you do that? How has working with others improved your practices? Made you more effective? What obstacles do you face today? How do you share best practices? How do you develop and enhance partnerships? What do you do today when you face obstacles that impede your success? What public-private collaborations do you engage in today to achieve new opportunities in the “whole community”?

3. Shape the Future

The future of Emergency Management will look much different in the future. What challenges do you anticipate? What will be the biggest obstacles to overcome? What innovations, technology and practices will impact how you do your work? What emerging issues do you anticipate? What are you doing now to prepare for the future? What is your vision for the future of emergency management? What practices, training, professional development and experience will be most critical for success?

Breakout sessions last 60 minutes. Structure your presentation to allow time for Q&A within the 60 minutes allocated.
